An Evening Hope

I sat in the quiet evening hour
As the lengthening shadows grew,
And my gaze was fixed on the parting sun
In a change of the gentlest hue.
And I could not help but contemplate
On the close of another day,
That the end of the day has a beauty, too,
As the morning light's first ray.
And so it is in the life we live,
Though moments be weary or long,
At end of the day, the sun's parting ray
Brings the gentle evening song.
I have lived my day on earth below,
And now with the evening's rays,
I can know no fear but expectant hope,
For my trust is in Christ, the Way.
And though lengthening shadows round me twine,
I will never fear the night;
To the golden hues of my Heavenly home,
I am guided by Christ, my light.

Life's Reflections

Darrell Ferguson Bobo, a son of the late Mr. William and Mrs. Ronester Bobo, was born January 3, 1960.

He was a graduate of Burke High School. Upon completing High School, Darrell became a certified Nursing and Teacher's Assistant.

He was employed at North Charleston High School, Roper and Charleston Memorial Hospitals.

Darrell was a member of Greater Beard Chapel A.M. E. Church, where he served as an Alter Boy during his childhood years. As an adult, Darrell became a member of the Senior Choir, where he served faithfully until his illness.

As a health care provider, Darrell enjoyed working with his patients and co-workers. He went the extra mile to ensure that his patients and their families were first priority. He continued to provide excellent care until his health failed him.

Darrell was transformed from mortal to immortality at 12:45 AM on June 9, 2000 in Atlanta, Georgia.

Eternal Love

God's love is eternal
We have nothing to fear,
No matter the problem
He'll always be near.
We can't understand
The reason sometime,
But eventually we find
The rhythm and rhyme.
For His greater plan
Of our lives on this earth,
There's a reason for all things
From the time of our birth.
If our love remains constant
With faith and with hope,
Our God will reward us
And teach us to cope -
Til the day our life's over
And we find release,
And we journey to heaven
To tranquility and peace.
